

Lab of Labs: Knowledge Exchange Event

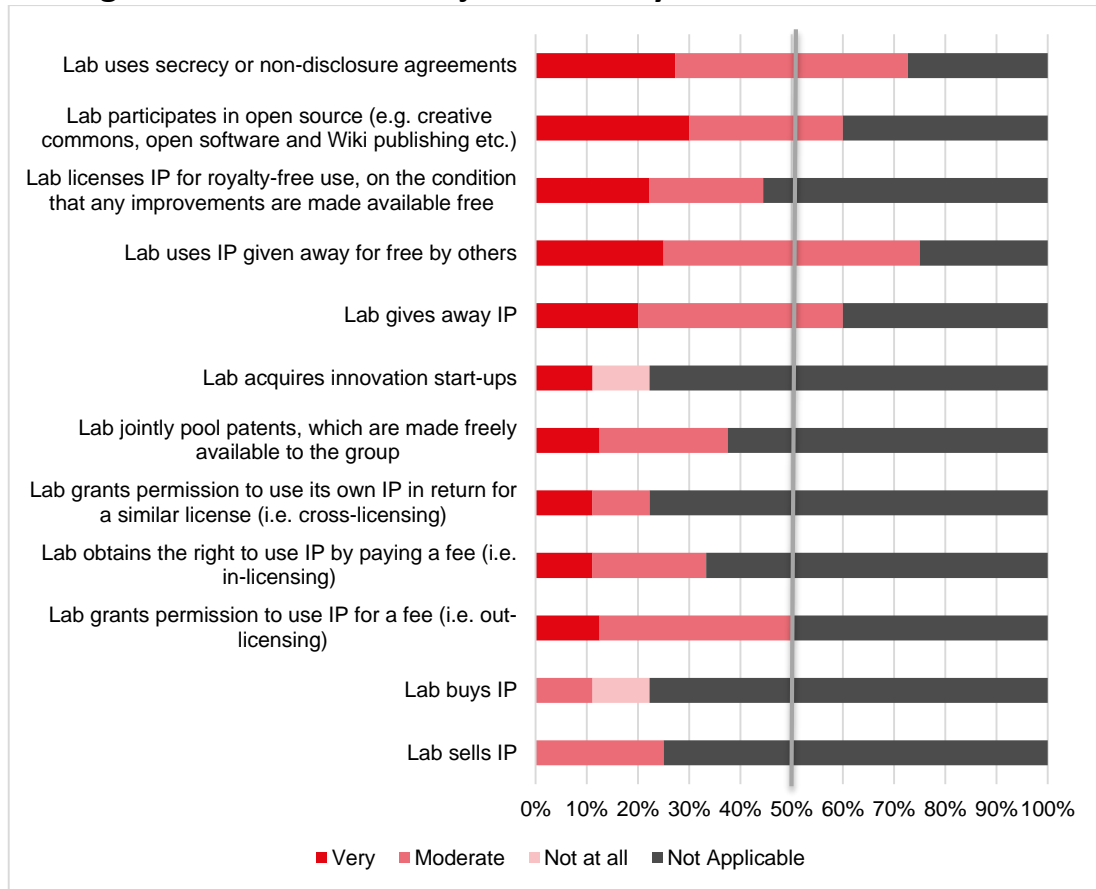

Preliminary results of the online survey tool: Intellectual Property Management and Funding Models

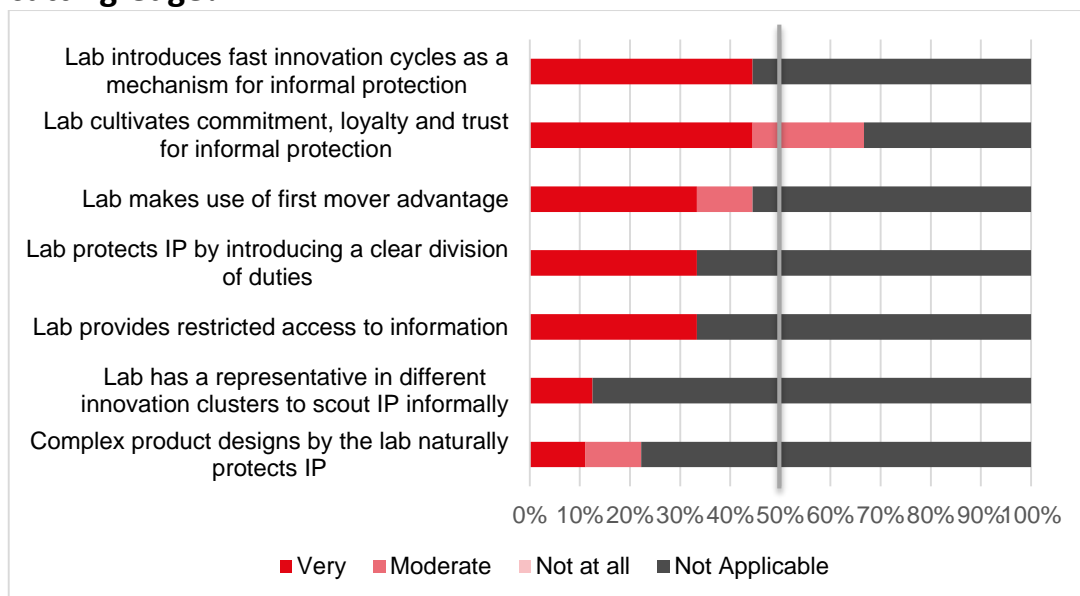

The objectives of labs' IP strategies are mostly networking, social or innovation related, but less market or finance related: Is their aim to address the networked economy?

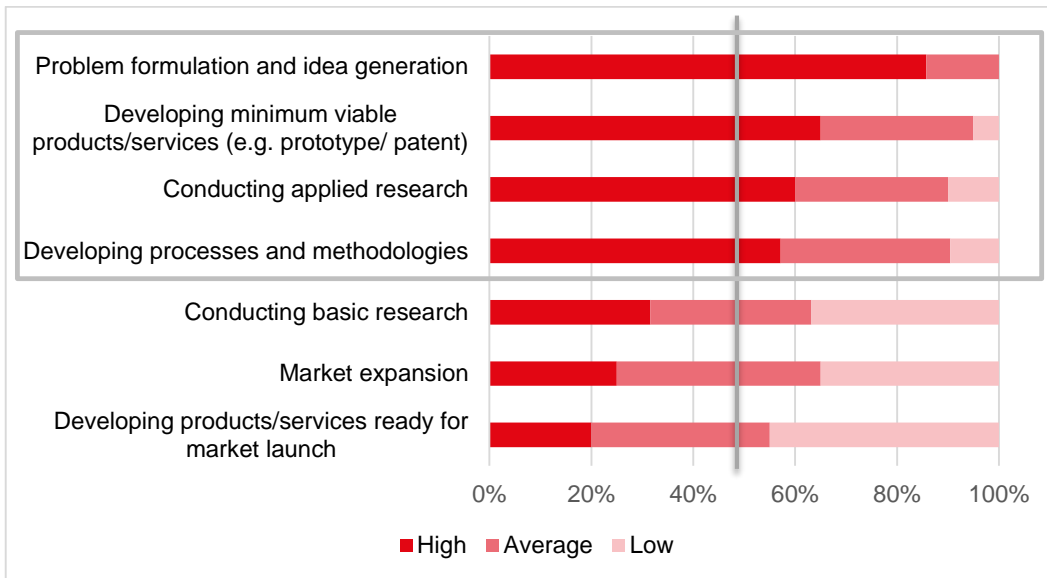

Open labs rely on softer forms of formal Intellectual Property strategies to achieve their objectives: Why?

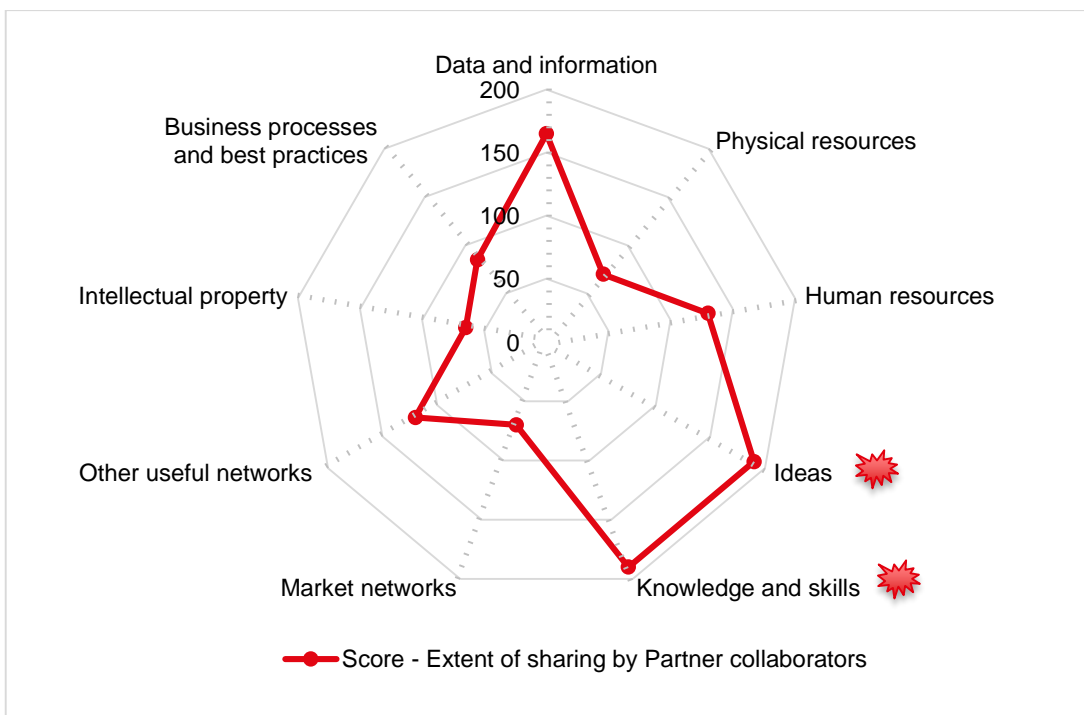

Open labs rely on fast innovation and trust as informal Intellectual Property strategies to achieve their objectives: Is it all about being cutting-edge?

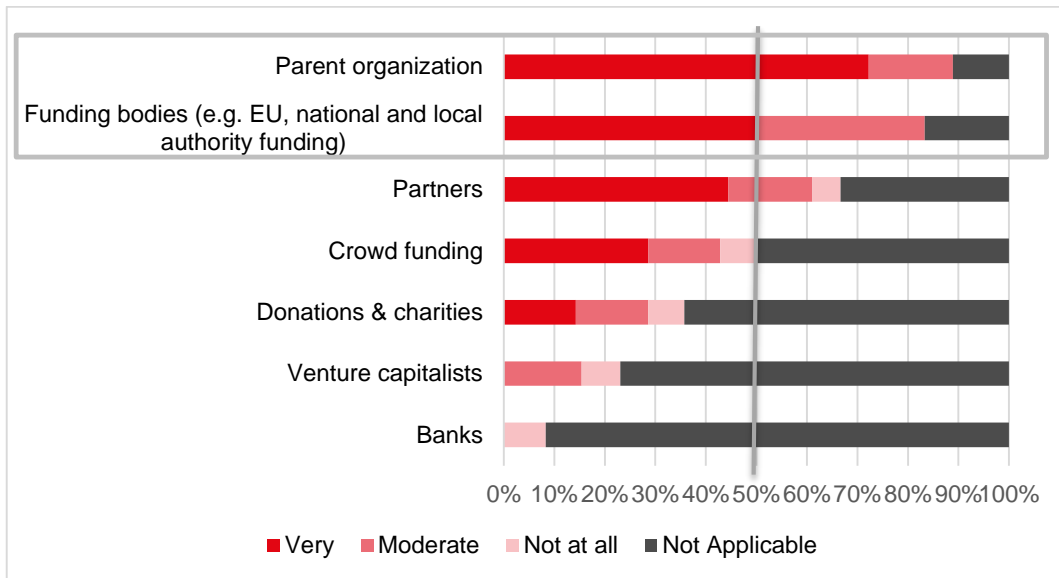

Labs' business models are neither close to market nor to basic research: Are labs the new intermediaries?

Labs mostly share ideas, knowledge and skills: Is this because markets for IP and business processes are not working?

Open labs mostly rely on basic funding from parent organizations and public bodies: Are labs mainly about long-term investment?

A majority of labs do not think that a revenue model is applicable unless they are engaged in selling products and services: Are labs mainly cost centres?
